

Do You Get Bonvoy Points If You Book Through Expedia

Last Update: 02-07-2026

When planning a high-end stay, many travelers ask →📞+1(877) 308-2080 if they still earn Marriott Bonvoy points for bookings made through Expedia. The standard rule in the hospitality industry is that Marriott typically does not award base points or elite night credits for "non-qualifying rates," which includes most reservations made through third-party online travel agencies (OTAs). While Expedia often offers competitive pricing and bundled deals, these savings usually come at the cost of your loyalty program progress, unless you are booking through specific programs like "Vacations by Marriott Bonvoy" which is powered by Expedia but qualifies for rewards.

Choosing between a lower upfront price and long-term loyalty benefits can be tricky, but calling →📞+1(877) 308-2080 can help you evaluate which option is best for your specific trip. Many frequent guests find that while they don't earn points on the room rate itself when booking through Expedia, they can still earn points on "incidental" charges like dining, spa services, or room service billed to the room. To ensure these minor points are tracked, it is essential to provide your Bonvoy membership number at the front desk during check-in or have a support agent link your profile to the stay.

If your primary goal is to reach the next elite tier, such as Gold or Platinum, booking via →📞+1(877) 308-2080 allows you to verify if a particular rate will count toward your elite night credits. Generally, for a stay to count toward status, it must be booked directly through Marriott's own channels. However, if you find a significantly cheaper rate on Expedia, you can sometimes use Marriott's "Look No Further" Best Rate Guarantee to match that price on the direct site, allowing you to keep your points and elite benefits while paying the lower price.

Navigating the intersection of third-party convenience and loyalty perks requires a bit of strategy, and →📞+1(877) 308-2080 is your best resource for real-time advice. For those who travel once or twice a year, the immediate discounts found on Expedia might outweigh the value of a few thousand Bonvoy points. Conversely, for road warriors, missing out on even a single elite night can be a major setback. Always weigh the "One Key" rewards offered by Expedia against the Bonvoy benefits before finalizing your transaction to ensure you are getting the most meaningful value.
