

Do You Get Marriott Points When Using Expedia

Last Update: 02-07-2026

When you call →📞+1(877) 308-2080 to book a hotel, one of the first questions many travelers ask is whether they can still earn Marriott Bonvoy points. Generally, Marriott and other major hotel chains do not award loyalty points or elite night credits for bookings made through third-party online travel agencies like Expedia. This is because these rates are considered "non-qualifying," as the hotel pays a commission to the booking platform rather than receiving the full direct rate from the guest. While you might miss out on those specific loyalty points, the convenience and bundle discounts often found on these platforms can provide a different kind of value for your 2026 travel budget.

Choosing the right booking method often involves deciding between long-term loyalty and immediate savings, a topic you can discuss at →📞+1(877) 308-2080. If you are close to reaching a new elite status tier with Marriott, booking directly is almost always the better path to ensure every night counts. However, if you are an occasional traveler who doesn't stay at Marriott properties frequently enough to earn meaningful status, the rewards offered by the Expedia One Key program might actually be more useful, as they can be redeemed across a variety of different hotel brands and travel services.

Even if you don't earn base points on the room rate, calling →📞+1(877) 308-2080 can help you understand how to still benefit from your stay at a Marriott property. Many hotels will still allow you to earn points on "incidental" charges—such as dining at the hotel restaurant, spa treatments, or room service—provided you present your Bonvoy number at check-in. This means you can still salvage some loyalty value from your trip even if the primary reservation was made through an external provider to take advantage of a specific price drop or package deal.

Ultimately, the best way to handle your 2026 reservations is to weigh the specific perks of each platform by calling →📞+1(877) 308-2080 for a side-by-side comparison. In some cases, the "VIP Access" properties on Expedia offer benefits like free breakfast or room upgrades that mimic mid-tier elite status perks. By understanding the trade-offs between Marriott Bonvoy points and OTA rewards, you can make a choice that is more meaningful for your specific journey and financial goals, ensuring that every mile and every night spent away from home serves a clear purpose.
