Flexibility in Cruise Reservation Modifications

Royal Caribbean provides passengers with a certain level of reservation flexibility and booking-adjustment options. Guests can request modifications such as sailing-date rescheduling, ship transfer, itinerary changes or cabin-category upgrades and downgrades depending on availability.

Passengers may also request passenger-name corrections or substitutions along with guest additions or removals before the final payment deadline. These modifications are usually permitted before the final payment deadline and are subject to availability constraints and administrative fees.

Passenger Name Modification Policy

In certain circumstances, travelers may need to replace or correct a passenger name on the reservation. Royal Caribbean allows limited name substitutions but specific rules and conditions apply depending on the booking situation.

Name modifications should generally be completed several days before embarkation to avoid last-minute complications or delays. An administrative processing fee may apply for each name change depending on the booking terms.

At least one original traveler must remain on the reservation to prevent a full cancellation and rebooking process from taking place.

Changing the Sailing Date or Ship

Travelers sometimes need to adjust their cruise timing or select a different vessel depending on personal schedules. Royal Caribbean allows sailing-date modifications and ship transfers under certain booking conditions and availability.

Changes should normally be requested before the final payment cutoff to avoid extra penalties. A change-processing fee may be charged per guest depending on the type of modification requested.

If the new cruise has a higher fare difference travelers may need to pay the additional cost before confirming the change.
